The Weather Man
—It Seems He's Right as Rain

Out of all the vagaries of the weather one clear fact emerges. Man has developed a remarkable system for telling what the weather will be in advance.

Of course the Weather Man misses it now and then when calling the shot on a specific day. But on his extended forecasts, issued every Tuesday and Friday for the following half-week, he is usually accurate — and when it comes to tracking general storms he is infallible.

The most remarkable long-range prediction I recall was one on May 1st in which the Weather Bureau advised we were in for a month of unusually heavy precipitation. It's the night of the 11th as I write this, and Hope just barely has its head out of water. My next-door neighbor, the First Presbyterian church, was under construction Saturday with a busy bulldozer, but on Monday the church site looked like the flooded plains of Holland and the bulldozer was grimly silent.

Our bored citizenry frequently joke about the Weather Man but few can match him for accuracy — while he sticks to factual predictions. It's only when someone, with or without official blessing, goes into the business of theorizing on generalities that the weather forecasting profession is hurt.

For instance, the other Sunday I noted a newspaper feature article in which some "expert" came up with the theory that Arkansas is more susceptible to tornadoes than any other state. I had a strong impression that this fellow was guilty of reading newspaper headlines rather than keeping himself busy studying his weather map, if, in fact, he really was a qualified weather expert.

Tornadoes are pretty well distributed over the United States, believe me. Yesterday's Star gave the following score on tornado deaths by states:

Minnesota — 8 dead, 30 injured.
Wisconsin — 1 dead.
Nebraska — 69 injured, 18 seriously.

Arkansas — Property damage at Russellville, but no deaths or injuries.

Kansas — No casualties in the south.

And of course after we went to press Monday there was the tragic news from Waco, Texas, which details are reported today.

Weather reporting is a world-wide science — not a subject for idle speculation on where tornadoes may hit — and the weather men of foreign nations are right up with our own. They exchange information around the world in man's common fight against the enemy storm.

It's a remarkable picture of co-operation on this unco-operative earth, and you don't have to be a two-bit philosopher to wonder why the same men who work together to solve the riddle of the weather can't begin to touch the infinitely less difficult problem of preventing war.

Health Dept. TB Unit to Tour Hempstead Schools

The Arkansas State Board of Health Tuberculosis X-ray unit will be in Hempstead County May 9-22. The clinic is being sponsored by the Hempstead County Tuberculosis Association. All teachers, janitors, bus drivers, milk and food handlers are urged to be X-rayed at this time. It will only take about one minute to be X-rayed, so take time out.

This clinic is not only for those named above but for everyone who would like to have a chest X-ray.

The following is a schedule for this county:

Tuesday, May 19, McCaskill from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.
Tuesday, May 19, Blevins from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.
Wednesday, May 20, Washington, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.
Wednesday, May 20, Fulton, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.
Thursday, Friday, May 21 and 22, Hope from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

It is believed that the last wild boars in Britain were killed about the 10th Century.

Gen. Clark Takes Washington Plan to Truce Talks

By ROBERT VERMILLION

PANMUNJOM, Korea, (UP) — Gen. Mark Clark flew to the Allied camp at Munsan today and handed his chief truce negotiator a new Washington-approved plan to break the Korean armistice deadlock.

Clark said the new Allied offer, a counter-proposal to the eight-point plan submitted by the Communists last Thursday, would be presented to the enemy "shortly" and I used the word "advisedly."

The United Nations supreme commander in the Far East reached the Munsan camp late in the afternoon after leaving his headquarters in Tokyo with the counter-proposal for disposing of Chinese and North Korean war prisoners who refuse to go home after an armistice.

He revealed he had the counter-proposal when he stopped off at Seoul on his way to Munsan. He said he believed the new formula finally might bring peace.

Clark told newsmen they could rest assured that "we have consulted with Washington on a matter of this importance."

The Communists had insisted their eight-point plan to break the truce deadlock on disposition of prisoners was acceptable without amendment.

Clark's announcement came as Red negotiators here argued that final disposition of anti-Red prisoners fighting repatriation has nothing to do with the armistice itself.

Instead, North Korean Gen. Nam Il, chief of the Communist truce delegation, said the fate of the 49,000 Allied captives who said they do not want to return to Communism must be determined by a political conference organized after the armistice is signed.

Rattles Don't Tell Age

Newly born rattlesnakes have no rattle, but develop a new joint with each succeeding moult. The older joints wear away, however, and are lost, so that the number of rattles is no criterion of the snake's age.

Slogan of the Air Age Just the Same as the Army's — You Have to Hurry Up and Wait

By HAL BOYLE

AT A MIDWEST AIRPORT — A man who travels regularly by air today no longer lives at home. He spends most of his life at airports.

The slogan of the air age is the same as the Army's: "Hurry up and wait."

A fellow might just as well divorce his wife and marry an airplane. You don't have time in one life to wait for both of them to get ready.

The airplane is an instrument of hurry which is supported to get you from city to city. It doesn't do that at all. It gets you from one reformed cow pasture to another. Then you sit down and wait for your baggage, which supposedly is in the belly of the plane but actually follows by oxcart.

Then, when you and your suitcase are reunited, you borrow a compass and set out for your real destination — the city.

Hope Convict Just Couldn't Wait Until Paroled

LITTLE ROCK, (UP) — James R. Shaw, 25-year-old Negro of Hope, Ark., was all dressed up to leave Cummins Prison Farm Saturday on parole.

But before the convicted burglar could leave, prison guards discovered that the clothes he was wearing had been lifted from a fellow inmate's locker.

Furthermore, the clothes contained the other inmate's billfold.

State Parole Director W.P. Ball said today that Shaw's parole was revoked on the spot.

Local Student Ranks High at University

Paul R. Daugherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Daugherty of Hope, was selected to receive the Senior Scholar Key from the College of Agriculture at University of Arkansas. He also received two other awards at Honors Day Convocation.

The highest scholastic honor that can be achieved is the winning of the Senior Scholar Key. In order to win the key a student must have been enrolled in the University of Arkansas a minimum of four semesters; he must be the highest ranking senior in his college; and he must receive the recommendation of a special scholarship committee.

Daugherty also received the Phi Kappa Phi honor.

Union Church Plans Annual Homecoming

Annual Homecoming services will be held at Union church Sunday, May 24, at 10 a. m. It was announced today by Mrs. Gertha Butler of Rosston, Mo.

The Rev. Doyle Marlar will deliver the sermon at 11 a. m. Mrs. Grisham will lead the singing, and Lige Lee of Blevins will give the devotion.

During the afternoon Horace Kennedy will be in charge of singing. Several quartets have been invited.

Attlee Says U. S. Group Wants Continued War

LONDON, (UP) — Clement Attlee, opposition leader in the House of Commons, charged today "there are elements in the United States that do not want a settlement" in Korea.

These elements, Attlee said, want an all out war with Communist China and against Communism in general. He also observed: "One often wonders who is the more powerful, President Eisenhower or Senator McCarthy."

The former prime minister, leader in the Labor party, spoke in a Commons debate keyed by Prime Minister Churchill's appeal yesterday for a conference of world leaders aimed at peace.

The Churchill appeal was supported today, in effect, by Pope Pius XII, who called for frank discussions among world leaders as "the first and indispensable condition of peace."

Wilson Plans Cut in Draft, Air Wings

By G. YALES McDANIEL

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The defense contribution toward a balanced national budget will trim 201,000 from military manpower goals in 13 months, lowered Air Force sights from 143 to 120 wings and reduce monthly draft calls to about 25,000.

Secretary of Defense Wilson has pinned these proposed reductions directly to an Eisenhower administration effort to close the gap between federal income and expenditures within two or three years.

The Pentagon boss set forth these and other military economy goals yesterday in supporting his defense budget request for $36,171,298,000 for the year starting July 1 — more than five billion dollars under that proposed by former President Truman.

Lawmakers Silent on Pay Hikes

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The touchy question of a $10,000 salary boost for members of Congress has been tossed out for Senate debate, but most lawmakers weren't talking about it publicly today.

Spending of the record, the position of many of them was: (a) it's wholly justified but (b) I haven't got a chance now.

However, one veteran supporter of a congressional pay raise, Rep. McCormack (D-Mass.), formerly the House floor leader, said forthrightly: "I think it's what we're entitled to. I'm for it."

The bill approved yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee would give senators and representatives a $25,000 annual salary. They now get a $12,500 salary and a $2,500 expense allowance, which are lumped together as $15,000 of taxable compensation. Up to $3,000 may be deducted for income tax purposes as Washington living expenses.

Tied in with the congressional hikes, would be $10,000 salary raises for federal judges and smaller pay increases for U.S. attorneys and their assistants.

Local Persons Involved in Federal Cases

TEXARKANA — In Arkansas federal court here Monday Judge John Miller dismissed, with prejudice, a civil action, J. L. Case Co. vs. Dorsey McEate, Jr., of Hope.

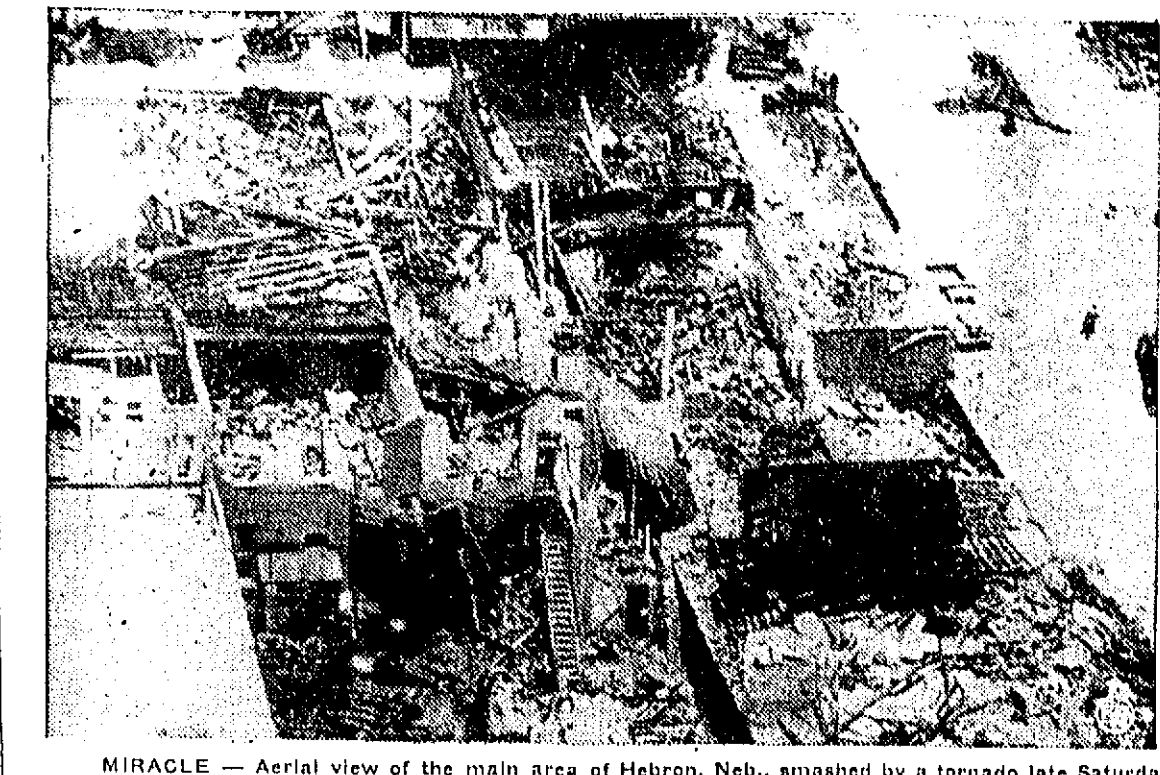

Another case, Ethel Wilkinson et al vs. Talbot Field, Jr., of Hope, was continued at the request of the plaintiff because of illness.

Judge Harry J. Lemley impeached a jury to hear the case of John Thomas Baker, charged with transporting a stolen automobile from Marshall, Texas, to Hope, Ark., on Feb. 16 of this year, with the case to be tried May 18.

Rivers Swell Out of Banks in Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Several rivers overflowed their banks in Arkansas today as the result of rains which have soaked the state since Sunday.

The Ouachita River flooded lowlands east of El Dorado, and the White River inundated areas around Clarendon and St. Charles.

But the weather man at Little Rock said the flood situation was not alarming. He predicted rain will continue to pelt most of the state today but will let up by tomorrow afternoon.

The Ouachita was expected to crest at 21 to 22 feet at Arkadelphia today, 5 feet above flood stage. By late Friday or Saturday, the weatherman predicted that the Ouachita would climb to 31 or 32 feet at Camden. Flood stage there is 26 feet.

The Caddo, Saline and Little Red Rivers were reported bank full with the Little Red expected to jump its banks in the Searcy-Judsonia area.

Near DeQueen, the Rolling Fork River has crested at 22 feet, the highest since 1947. Thousands of acres in the area are reported under water.

Owen Store at Nashville Is Robbed

The Ben J. Owen department store at Nashville was robbed Monday night, the thieves taking several hundred dollars' worth of merchandise and damaging the cash register.

Mr. Owen said they failed to get into the safe. Apparently the thieves made a leisurely job of it, changing clothes in the course of the robbery as evidenced by the number of burned cigarettes on the floor and some discarded articles.

A couple of billboards containing pictures were left behind by the vandals and may give officers a clue.

Nothing to Crow About Says Paper

SAN ANGELO, Tex. (UP) — The San Angelo Standard-Times usually prints a big red rooster on its front page when rain falls in this dry West Texas section.

Rain fell heavily — up to 6 inches — with the tornado that killed eight persons and injured more than 100 yesterday.

The Standard-Times didn't print its red rooster today, however.

A front-page story told why. "Nothing to crow about," said the headline.

Meet Here to Air Agri Program, Wheat Acreage

Wednesday, May 13, representatives of Agricultural Agencies of Southwest Arkansas will meet in Hope for the purpose of discussing (1) the proposed 1954 Agricultural Conservation program and (2) instructions for completion of wheat acreage survey.

Representatives of Extension Service, Soil Conservation Service, Forest Service, and PMA will attend the conference.

In addition to state and district representatives, the following counties will be represented at the meeting: Clark, Columbia, Hempstead, Howard, Lafayette, Little River, Miller, Nevada, Ouachita, Pike, Sevier, and Union. Soon after the meeting, each county group will confer and make recommendations of the most needed conservation practices for their respective counties. A similar procedure will be followed in all counties in Arkansas and in other states.

Heavy Hail, 3.35 Inches of Rain Strike This City

Torrential rain, hail and high winds struck violently in the city about mid-afternoon yesterday but fortunately resulted in little more than alarm for uneasy residents.

Little damage was reported outside of gardens and truck farms beaten down by hail which at one time completely covered city streets but was quickly melted by gales of rain. West Bros. Department Store in downtown Hope had some water damage when the hail caused the building's roof to leak.

However, the store is open for business as usual and several window panes were knocked out of the State Police Station as well as a few houses around town. In the county swollen creeks washed out several bridges on rural roads.

The Experiment Station reported a total of 3.35 inches of rain during the past 24 hour period, most of it coming yesterday afternoon.

Total rainfall for the year up to 7 a.m. Tuesday is 22.91 inches or 5.20 inches more than the same period last year. However, by the end of May last year the total was 23.69 with 5.98 inches fell from May 18-31.

Hope Dims for Six Missing Off Freighter

HOPE, Ark. (UP) — Hope dimmed today for six men missing in the sinking of the freighter Henry Steinbrenner off the Rock of Ages in Lake Superior.

There were 15 known survivors and 10 known dead of the 31-man crew. The Coast Guard Cutter Woodruff from Duluth was still sweeping the area today in a search for survivors of Monday's disaster.

Coast Guardsmen said it might be days or weeks before the bodies of any missing men who were drowned floated to the surface or washed ashore.

The 52-year-old carrier foundered and sank in 10 minutes yesterday when a 50-mile-an-hour gale, with gusts up to 70 miles an hour, ripped off hatch covers and washed 20-foot waves into the hold.

The master of the 197-foot freighter, Capt. Albert Siglin, 55 of Vermilion, O., said he had no time to give the order to abandon ship and send out an SOS.

With graduation just around the corner it's interesting to note that of the 92 seniors to graduate this year there are 46 boys and 46 girls, unusual in that girls almost always outnumber the boys.

And the State Health Department's TB unit is planning a tour of Hempstead schools and will X-ray teachers, janitors, bus drivers, food handlers and everyone in any way connected with schools.

At Norman, Oklahoma young men of Oklahoma University's naval program will tour South America and Caribbean ports this summer aboard U. S. Battleships.

James Watson Compton of 511 N. Main, Hope, and up at Henderson Ida Hamilton of Prescott is recording secretary and Caroline Hawthorne of Hope is pamphlet representative of the Alpha Sigma Tau sorority for the coming year.

Mrs. P. J. Holt, historian of the Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers and Mrs. Oliver Adams, district director, helped install officers for the coming year in the Chamber of Commerce office and go in a group to Kinsch and Associates.

settled place it will no longer be practical to make the journey from airport to city.

Since the big aluminum sky birds can't adjust themselves to man, I think man might as well start adjusting himself to them.

It is high time we started gradually deserting our out-of-date cities, and began building new temples of culture around our airports. What good does it do to zip through the air from Chicago to New York in three hours, if a man can watch his fingernails grow while he is trying to get from the airport into town?

Fifty years from now Manhattan, Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles probably will be abandoned, crumbling symbols of the past, inhabited by woodchucks and visited only by the more adventurous tourists, willing to undergo any hardship to get a snapshot of a quaint, former way of life.

Yes, sir, the bright new cities of the future will be ringed around the big paved airport where the sky birds nest. The airport will be the city.

The trouble with the air voyager today, stuck at an airport with nothing to do between planes, is that he was born just a half century too soon.

Largest Creatures

Blue whales, which weigh up to 15 tons and sometimes are 100 feet long, are the largest creatures known. They would equal in length, and far surpass in weight, the gigantic extinct dinosaurs, according to one authority.

Wilson Plans

President Truman. His testimony, given in secret, was later made public at the Pentagon.

Wilson said, moreover, that the military forces provided in his reduced budget would be subject to whatever change might be indicated in a full review of the "unified defense plan" in the next few months.

The defense chief told a House Appropriations subcommittee he hoped to keep actual military spending to $43,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year, while increasing the acquisition of fighting gear.

Truman had recommended spending $45 billion.

This would entail using some of the 63 billions carried over from past years' appropriations.

Wilson stressed an intention to see that the military services carry out his manpower reduction orders without weakening any combat force or reducing the number of existing fighting units.

The Air Force is the only one of the four fighting services that faces an eventual, measurable cut in units. It now has 103 of the 100 wings called for at this stage in the 148-wing goal set after the Korean War was well under way.

Although he called the 120-wing goal an "interim" one, Wilson played Air Force chances of getting more units to changes in the "military situation and the number (of wings) that can be kept modernized and effective."

Wilson maintained that having 114 wings ready for action by June 30, 1954 will represent a "very substantial increase" in Air Force combat strength. The number of planes in a wing varies from 30 bombers to 75 fighters.

While conceding that 10 of the current 103 wings lack their planned modern equipment, Air Force officers said the old Truman program would have given them 133 wings by the end of 1954 and full 143-wing strength by the end of 1955. Against this, they estimated that the nearly 95 billion dollar cut proposed by Wilson in aircraft procurement will delay reaching even the tentative 120-wing goal until mid-1956.

Wilson anticipated such Air Force unhappiness. He argued that loss of advance financing is required now that the production program is well under way and aircraft and equipment designs are "becoming firm" with less need for costly and time-consuming changes.

Wilson told the congressmen that all of the military services could get along with fewer people in housekeeping, overhead and non-combat categories.

He said he expects the Air Force to drop from the Truman budgeted total of 1,061,000 by June 30, 1953, to 900,000, and to 815,000 12 months thereafter. The Air Force currently numbers about 875,000 officers and men.

The Army is the only service to get a momentary boost in the proposed fiscal 1954 budget. Virtually all of the 1 1/2 billion dollar increase is to cover cost of equipping additional South Korean divisions and to provide advance financing of part of Korean combat costs.

If the Korean War ends in the meantime, Wilson said, he will trim the Army's uniformed rolls by 188,000, or by 177,000 if the fighting continues at the present glutted rate. He said this would not mean deactivating any of the Army's 20 combat-ready divisions, 18 regimental combat teams or 17 air-transport battalions.

The defense budget would maintain the Navy's strategic combat strength while reducing the personnel manning by 35,000 to 240,000. The Marine Corps would operate its largest three divisions and three air wings with 13,000

NEW YORK STOCK

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Lethargy

gripped the Stock Market again today and prices barely budged from previous levels.

The trading pace held right around that of yesterday which was the slowest of the year. Among leading issues, price changes were measured in a few cents a share.

Trends were lacking in nearly all sections of the list.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

CHICAGO, Ill. — Grains showed flashes of strength on the Board of Trade today but for the most part were unable to hold their gains.

Soybeans were more persistent in maintaining advances than the major cereals. Bids were helped by advancing sea oil prices as well as continued small country marketings.

Feed grains were ahead most of the session, particularly corn, but inclined to sag toward the close.

Deferred wheat contracts sank to new seasonal lows at no time in response to the Agriculture Department's boost in estimated winter wheat production.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Cotton futures were irregular today. Trading was fewer officers and men than the 348,000 provided in the discarded

Truman budget.

The Truman goal for all the armed forces had been 3,647,000 by mid-1954, compared with about 3-515,000. Wilson cut the target to

3,300,000 — or 2,300,000 if the Korean War ends.

Wilson's budget presentation revived his earlier expressed hope that draft calls can be reduced to about half of the $5,500 average for the first six months of 1953.

He tied this hope to the success of the services in maintaining full combat strengths under the overall manpower reduction.

the center of the area, the American Life Insurance building jetted up 22 stories into the air.

The gray building looked like an illuminated rocket, in the glare of the floodlights. It appeared to be the only undamaged building in the 26-square block area.

Newsmen have counted 200 automobiles that were totally demolished or badly wrecked. One, a sedan, was crushed under seven tons of debris so that the top was only three feet above the ground.

Another car, a black, shiny one, looked undamaged on the side nearest the curb. But the left side, where the driver would have been sitting, was pitted to less than half its normal height by a huge steel girder which crushed it from bumper to bumper.

On second street, for an area of four blocks, poles supporting high power lines leaned across the street at a 45-degree angle.

The original Dr. Pepper plant, a three-story brick building, is almost a total wreck.

The plate glass fronts of many stores look as if they had exploded outward from the force of a tribo-atomic vacuum. The whole fronts of office buildings were ripped away, but the desks and chairs were sitting undisturbed in the now-empty offices. The roofs of some of the two and three story buildings have waves in them.

Small cylinders of oxygen, to revive victims, were stationed at intervals throughout the stricken area. I saw one soldier with three of the cylinders and masks, waiting for a call that a victim had been located.

Mrs. Guy Sims stood by from a building that was relatively undamaged and watched as rescue workers hurried into the debris in the alley behind the Dennis building.

"My husband's down there, somewhere," she said.

She didn't know at the time he was dead. Mrs. Sims was employed at a nearby drugstore, and explained "He was coming after me in the car, and he usually waits in the alley behind Dennis," but he hasn't come yet."

Hours later the body of Guy Sims was retrieved and identified.

some of the key assistants to the attorney general.

Come senators said privately they thought the congressional boost was being offered under good auspices.

They cited these: It is bound up with an increase for federal judges which many lawyers long have urged; 1953 is not an election year; the bill's sponsor, Sen. McCarran of Nevada, is a Democrat, which takes some of the heat off the new Republican majorities in Congress.

But against this, these sources said many members are sure to look askance at the bill because of the economy promises made by many members.

"I don't think it's timely," said Sen. George (D-Ga.), who added he thinks members of Congress are "unpopular."

McCarran, who introduced the bill and headed a subcommittee which held hearings on it, said the measure would not be called up for debate right away.

"I want senators to have some time to think it over," he said.

tastic torrents of rubble—until yesterday part of the business section — were panned. It seemed that every time a bulldozer took a bite into the rubble, more bodies were disclosed.

WACO, Tex. (U) — The U. S. weather bureau warned today of the possibility of more Texas tornadoes in the wake of two man-athletic twisters yesterday which left at least 51 — and possibly as many as 150 — dead.

The dead tornadoes, striking with rare fury 200 miles and two hours apart, killed at least 42 persons in this Central Texas city of 90,000 yesterday. Eight were killed at San Angelo far to the west.

The U. S. weather bureau at New Orleans this morning issued this severe warning: "There is a possibility of a few tornadoes in the area bounded by Tyler, Lufkin, Yorkum, Del Rio, Eagle Pass area, Junction and Tyler remainder of today and early tonight."

Hundreds of weary rescue workers dug with bare hands and bulldozers here into two piles of rubble which had been part of Waco's downtown business section.

Bodies of five teenagers were recovered during the night from the wreckage of a pool hall. Fifteen other youths were missing in the building.

Police Sgt. John Wohlwend said "I don't believe another person is alive" in the wreckage of the five-story R. T. Dennis building and those adjacent. Exactly how many were buried beneath two grotesque mounds of rubble was not known. More than 50 persons are missing.

They succeeded at 6:45 a. m. in freeing Mrs. Lillie Matkin, a slightly-built, elderly woman who for almost 14 hours had been trapped behind a divan—a fortunate safety pocket.

Forrest Moore, member of Baylor University's staff who relayed rescue instructions over a loud-speaker during the all-night rescue work, said "There are a reported 30 to 50 trapped in the basement of the Dennis building."

Ironically, if there were people trapped in the basement they could have escaped the tornado but drowned. Moore said a steel beam had punctured a six-inch water pipe and water cascaded into the basement for seven hours.

"The basement was almost full," Moore said, "when the water was finally shut off. Firemen began pumping the water out at 4:15 a. m."

Belatedly, reports came of a third tornado yesterday which raced into Sutton County near Sonora, Tex., and damaged utility poles and cattle-feeding pens. The Texas tornadoes followed week-end comes up for re-election next year, said, "The bill had better be screened carefully—very carefully."

Knit Gloves in Nylon Keep Shape

These Spring gloves lend a delicate air on hand but are practical as well as pretty. They're completely washable, dry quickly. Nylon American knit (above left) has rows of tiny red and black dots that are screened onto white background. Nylon boucle knits (above) have diamond pattern on back, fitted wrist and crocheted-effect cuff. Trim fit of these nylon knits (left) is achieved through use of elasticized cuffs. Lay cotton string gloves (right) have hand-knitted look at budget price. These have transparent fingers and double cuff, will hold their shape indefinitely. — By Gale Dugas, NIA Woman's Editor.

DeWitt Girl Wins $1000 Lion Award

EL DORADO — Miss Jo Hamlet Carot, 17, a young DeWitt, Ark., high school student who believes that every citizen can help improve education by realizing that "although the schools need his dollars, he must also assure himself that the moral influence of the schools upon young people is being adequately emphasized," has won a $1,000 college scholarship in the final Lion Oil Scholarship Fund essay contest of the current school year.

Miss Carot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon J. Carot, R. 1, Box 10, near DeWitt, is a senior at DeWitt High School, according to C. R. Olson, director of the fund. Her essay, "How Every Citizen Can Help Improve Education," was chosen as the best of hundreds entered in a contest zone embracing Arkansas and portions of Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri. Fifteen additional students in the zone were adjudged Merit Award winners and they and their teacher-sponsors will each receive a $25 cash award.

Any citizen who is interested in helping improve education may obtain a copy of Miss Carot's helpful and timely essay, together with the winning essays for the other two contest zones, by writing the Lion Oil Scholarship Fund, El Dorado, Ark., Mr. Olson said.

DOROTHY DIX

He's Good Company

Dear Miss Dix: I have met a man of 27, divorced, with three children. I find him good company. I'm only 17, but have always gotten along better with older people. I'm not in love with him, but I wonder if I should stop seeing him before I become seriously inclined.

A Difficult Problem
Answer: Seventeen is an age to find fresh, new romance. Instead of making do with a divorced man, it's a good thing you are in love with him, and I strongly urge you to end this friendship before it is too late. The step-mother role calls for wisdom far beyond your years, and the job of second wife isn't easy to fill at any age.

Dear Miss Dix: Recently we moved from a nearby city and I enrolled in the local school. I am finding it very difficult to break into the groups here, although I was well liked in my old school. I am 14.

Answer: As you grew up with the boys and girls in the old school, you were naturally a member of the group and had no need to work to be accepted. Now you are in a position where you must prove eligibility to be one of the crowd. Join every possible activity, even if you must work in from the edges. Don't be afraid to wash the dishes after refreshments are served. Prove you are co-operative and pleasant — then you can't lose. Ignore all apparent rebuffs; they almost certainly aren't intended rudenesses.

Dear Miss Dix: The boy I like is younger than I am, and, though he comes to see me during the week, he doesn't date me week-ends. We get along very well, except that he seems rather distant at times.

Answer: You are more mature than the boy, and expect the same stability from him. He's too young for steady dating, which is what you expect. Give him a chance to grow up.

Dear Miss Dix: Should a mother be expected to wash her twelve-year-old daughter's hair?

Answer: Most youngsters of that age take considerable pride in doing their own hair-washing, and also in setting it. Usually they do a mighty fine job. You've spoiled your child by doing these things for her too long. Relax, and insist on her taking over her personal chores.

Dear Miss Dix: I've been going with a boy from another school, and my mother says if I continue to date him, the boys from my own school won't ask me out. Is she right? I'm 15.

Answer: Your Mom is certainly on the right track. The best way to teen-age popularity is through your own crowd. You will jeopardize your chances of dating by showing your preference for boys of another school. Don't you agree that it would be natural for your male schoolmates to resent your marked preference for the pupils in another school? Remember how fiercely school pride burns.

Fair Enough

The executive pension racket has become so greedy that something will have to be done to control or stop it fast. The corporate officials who are, in theory, the employees of the stockholders, walk off with all the profits and assets. My collection of information is spotty, disclosing only the pension plans of companies taken at random, but this brazen thing is now standard in big business. Furthermore, a sizable fellow with a number of friends in big executive circles may qualify for a lavish pension plan of a stock corporation. All he has to do is get a job with the company, and he will be paid by the stockholders.

I recently cited the case of an executive of a Hollywood concern who had been "approached" by the "stockholders" by their agent, a business administrator, provided an enormous pension not only for himself but, in case of his death, for his wife, and in case of her death, for his estate, for ten years. The contract did not even buy him "exclusive" services.

This was taken all around, the most audacious grab of all that I have encountered. But the case of the Sinclair Oil corporation of New York, is bold enough. Now I am George Spelvin, American, in the flesh, in matters of this kind. I grope through legal language and the jargon of the financier and I have the same trouble with a balance sheet that I have with a time-table. In buying stock, I rely on tips, intuition and luck. Thus far I have never been badly hurt, probably because the Roosevelt-Truman war boom kept stocks up and provided good dividends of 50 cent dollars. In my case, however, the dividends are almost entirely illusory because they come in my top income-tax bracket. Thus, for taking all the risk with my savings after taxes, I come up with an average dividend of less than three per cent, but in half by inflation. Moreover, I find that in all cases in my diversified, though skinny, "portfolio," I am under contract to pay enormous pensions to a lot of fat cats who have been drawing big salaries from me and millions of other faceless suckers for many years and by all rights, should have saved money for their own old age just as we have tried to do.

I know a number of such executives socially and when I mention this sort of problem over our nattering at occasional rejoicings, they just laugh. Apparently they are on good ground. The securities and exchange commission made a pass at this thing about fifteen years ago when one of the eligible officers of Republic Steel told me his conscience wouldn't let him take advantage of Republic's pension plan, but nothing came of it.

Now what do I find in this Sinclair thing? I find that P. C. Spencer, the president, who draws $150,000 a year, shall have, at 65, a pension of $22,380 and that the stockholders shall pay all but a trifling amount of this pension. Under the "retirement plan," Mr. Spencer must pay two per cent of his salary from $600 up to $3,000 and three per cent of the remaining $147,000. My expense-account arithmetic tells me that Mr. Spencer thus pays only $4,482 a year toward his guaranteed annuity of $22,380 after retirement. He is now 60, and, if we assume that he has been paying this much for five years and will continue to pay $4,482 a year until he has retired, he will have paid in $44,820, or roughly, the equivalent of two years' pension.

Thereafter, his pension would be altogether the burden of unoppressed stockholders who gave him a whole of a salary while he was working for them. In reality they were not consulted about his annuity because they had no practical power to turn down the proposition. It will be a tax-exempt cost of the business, whereas the profits of the stockholders are heavily taxed before they leave the hands of the corporation and taxed again after poor Spelvin gets them. This exemption of corporate outlay for pensions adds another straw to the tax burden of the sap who provides practically all of the "risk" or "venture" capital.

It is painfully plain that the executives of big business, like the bloated unwholes of the labor racket, give a thought to their masses of subjects, or victims, only after they have taken fond care of themselves. But even this is not all. There are two more slick tricks in this little brochure.

The Sinclair executives thought it wise to encourage their "personnel" to save money and therefore offered to put up 50 cents for every dollar of savings by an employee deposited with the company, by allotment, up to five per cent of his salary.

Under a stock purchase option plan, Mr. Spencer and other officers and key employees were given options on "unissued shares." And then a "special fund" was created out of "surplus" profits from which a cash dividend was paid, but applied on the unpaid balance of the purchase price. Thus, the stockholders, if large, are forced to make free gifts of money to help these princes of privilege pay for their stock.

Mr. Spencer "optioned" 24,935 shares. At the current dividend rate of $2.60, he is getting a free bonus of $19,933 out of "surplus" profits which would seem to be as much the property of the common man as of the officers and "key" employees.

The Baltimore Orioles paid $100,000 to acquire pitcher Al Bumbry from the Los Angeles Angels. The deal was a surprise to many fans.

Last night, Bumbry pitched for the Orioles and had a very good game. He pitched six innings, allowing only two runs and striking out five batters.

The Orioles had been looking for a pitcher to replace their injured ace, and Bumbry was the perfect choice. He had been with the Angels for several years and was a proven winner.

Psychiatrist Tells of His Work

By RENNIE TAYLOR
AP Science Reporter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A demure, neatly combed woman turned into a dark, irascible, irresponsible creature in front of her doctor and later into a bright, agreeable, conscientious girl, was described today to the nation's psychiatrists.

This girl now has three different personalities, changeable at will. She is married and has a small child, but she denies her husband and child whenever she turns into anything except the shy young housewife who first sought medical attention two years ago for terrible headaches.

The unusual case was reported to the American Psychiatric Association in a medical report as well as in color movies by Dr. Corbett H. Thigpen and Dr. Hervey M. Cleckley of Augusta, Ga.

The case is not unique. About 100 such instances of multiple personalities in single individuals have been reported. But Dr. Thigpen's presentation was medically inter-

What Breed Should I Buy?
By JOE STETSON
Dog Editor

"What breed should I buy?" When Andy asked this question he was re-echoing one asked me literally thousands of times a year—in person—by phone and by mail.

The usual follow-up to this question is "Why do you want the dog?" So I followed the routine with Andy. If Andy had wanted a dog for a special purpose the choice would be narrowed down to the breeds most adequate for the purpose; the pointing breeds; sight hounds; scent hounds; flushing spaniels; or what have you, according to their use—but I knew Andy didn't hunt a broader field.

"I just want a good companion around the house that will get along with the youngsters," said Andy. "What breed makes the best family dog?"

"Andy," I said, "it is just as illogical to believe that all the dogs of one breed are bad and all the dogs of another are good as to assume that people are good, poor or indifferent, depending upon their nationality."

"There are, of course, some exceptions in dogdom that were bred specifically for a purpose requiring a temperament incompatible with ordinary living. We can draw of the employee's income. Mr. Spencer gets $100,000 a year, five per cent of that is $5,000, deposited with the company by Mr. Spencer strictly for his own benefit, and the poor, worried, tax-hated stockholders are forced to pay $3,770, or one-half of his savings, to encourage this thirty little chap to drop his pennies in the cookie jar.

Don't go yet! Under a stock purchase option plan, Mr. Spencer and other officers and key employees were given options on "unissued shares." And then a "special fund" was created out of "surplus" profits from which a cash dividend was paid, but applied on the unpaid balance of the purchase price. Congressman Speaks Up for Air Force

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, AP — Sen. Stenholm (D-Miss.) spoke up for the Air Force today as several lawmakers, alarmed over the prospect of an unbalanced budget, took a stab at the most obvious target for economy.

Stenholm said in an interview he will not vote to cut Air Force funds even if the budget stays the balanced, as Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey has said it must in the next fiscal year.

Stenholm, a member of the armed services committee, said:

"I was trying to help balance the budget once and voted to cut the Air Force and then the Korean War came along. I'm a married child on that score and never again I am more and more convinced that our military power has got to be in the air."

The Eisenhower administration has recommended that request for new military appropriations be cut $5,100,000,000 below previous levels for the fiscal year starting July 1. Air and Navy programs were cut, but the Army was increased because of the addition of supplies for Korea.

Members of Congress have said this decision probably will mean that the Air Force's building goals will not be met at original target dates.

Sen. Ferguson (D-Mich.) said on an NBC television program yesterday that the defense budget cut would result in a "more modern" Air Force by the end of the year.

Rep. Mahon (D-Tex.), on the same program, said it would cut a plane procurement in half.

Sen. Taft of Ohio, the Republican leader, has said he frankly doesn't know whether further reductions can be made in the military funds. As an advocate of strong air power, however, he is expected to seek for economy elsewhere.

Testing because of the provocative personal relationships involved. The young woman identified only as Eve White, an alias, changed suddenly about a year ago. She said she had been hearing voices. She asked if she might be going insane. A queer look spread over her face and in a couple of seconds she changed into a coquettish character who winked and said, "Hi, doc."

Dr. Thigpen (named the personality involved in this change Eve Black; Eve Black goes to parties, drinks too much sometimes, and occasionally turns back into Eve White and seems horrified at finding herself in the middle of drunk and gaily.

It was then that I made my first and last feeble effort to get out of it.

"Robert," I said, "I don't like this. There is something funny going on."

"I think so too," he answered. "Interesting, isn't it?"

I looked at him and saw that he was beaming, and knew that we were lost. If Robert had become interested in a problem, he would stay with it until he had solved it, one way or another. Now he was interested, and that was that.

I settled back against his shoulder. After all there are worse places to be trapped than in a super luxury yacht on a velvety tropical sea. My uneasiness was ridiculous. Nobody is ever sorry for a girl on a yacht.

The tender was coming out again, this time with a solitary man, neither young nor old, and if you were describing him you wouldn't know what to say, for there was nothing in his appearance to take hold of. He stood quite a surprising length of time looking up at the ship before he climbed the ladder, as if he were making up his mind whether to do it or not. It struck me that there was something bleak about him.

There were no sounds of greeting from the deck above, and he did not come below.

"That makes eight," I said to Robert.

He nodded, and as if to bear me out, the engines began to throb, and soon the black yacht Spiritus was under way.

The next morning Opdyke made a big production of introducing everyone to everyone as they came on deck, and if any of the characters had met before they graciously gave no sign of it. The care-faced man who arrived with Gay Walton was a Mr. Frederick Brown, a lawyer from Washington. Our host made a point of telling us that he had once been with the F.B.I.

The couple who had seemed not to be meshing as they climbed aboard, were Larry and Carlotta Redding. He had a seat on the stock exchange, we were told, and he had the further distinction of being the son of Mr. Opdyke's dead partner, Opdyke "dear boy" him all over the deck, and the Reddings were as smooth as cream with each other also. Robert thought it was an act for the public, and I thought they must Robert looked at me. "Married folks, eh?" he remarked, and I made like punching his jaw.

This time the cries of welcome seemed to come from Mr. Opdyke, and the answers were subdued as most of the vanishing points heard no time at all before it was heard footsteps coming down, and doors shutting opposite, but no good nights.

"Do it your own way then," he told her angrily.

Bradley Set to Retire, Breaks Ties

By DON WHITEHEAD
For James Marlow

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Omar Bradley has served his country in military for almost 40 years and is now a soldier—still youthful, energetic and hearty at 60—is now preparing for an active retirement. Bradley has no intention of trying to cling to the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff which he held for the past four years.

In fact, he has told friends he already has accepted a job which will keep him busy for years to come. He is keeping secret what the new job will be.

Recently he told a friend: "At first, I thought I'd just retire to catch up on my fishing and hunting—and take things easy. But I realized that my friends would find that kind of retirement didn't live too long."

"I'll have a job that will keep me mentally active and still leave me some time for hunting and fishing. It will be best that way."

But, across this land there will be many veterans of World War II and other citizens who will regret to see Bradley step from active duty. For there has grown up among soldiers and civilians alike a "Bradley cult."

It is not that these people think Bradley can do no wrong—but they have faith that even in his mistakes Bradley has an integrity and honesty which shows no compromise with honor.

"Bradley cult" had its beginning back in North Africa when Bradley was a major general with his first combat command. He had come to North Africa to not as Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's eyes and ears at the front—where the Allied armies weren't doing too well in a bogged-down winter campaign.

Initially there was a shakeup in commands, and Bradley took over the American 2nd Corps. His handling of the corps in the final drive to conquer Tunisia became the talk of North Africa.

With this achievement under his belt, it was a logical move for Eisenhower to put Bradley in command of the corps which spearheaded the fighting in Sicily. Again Bradley distinguished himself.

Suppose the late Gen. Pyle did more than anyone else in those days to bring Bradley's name to the public's attention. Pyle called him "the GI's general" and the GI's liked him because he was so democratic of Bradley, who looks a

PHS Seniors Set For New Orleans Trip

Final plans have been made for the senior class to make their senior trip to New Orleans. The group will leave Friday, May 15, and be gone until the 20th. Rooms are at the Hotel Senator.

Following in the planned trip in great deal more like a schoolmaster than a military man.

Bradley's handling of troops in Sicily pleased Eisenhower so much that he named the Missouri as his top commander for the invasion of Normandy.

Bradley played a major part in mapping the strategy for the invasion, the breakthrough at St. Lo, the liberation of France and the conquest of Germany.

After the war, he served for a time as head of the Veterans Administration, and then he was chosen to be chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In this latter role, he has gone through some stormy periods and come under fire for the policies which he has supported. Perhaps the stormiest period was when he openly opposed the proposals by Gen. Douglas MacArthur then Far Eastern commander, to extend the Korean War to hit Chinese bases in Manchuria.

In all this, Bradley has steadfastly maintained that the duty of the military was not to make policy—but to present the military facts of life so that civilian leaders could make the policy.

He was praised by MacArthur's revolt against established policy. And likewise he has been deeply disturbed by Gen. James A. Van Fleet's active campaign for a change of policy in Korea. Bradley has made clear to friends his belief that such revolts are damaging to civilian control over the armed forces and to military discipline.

Soon Bradley will pass on these problems to someone else and if his plans work out he will find himself a place in the role of a civilian.

As for his place in history, this is already secure.

48 Mine Pickets Tossed in Jail

CLAY, W. Va. (AP)—Forty-eight mine pickets were housed in two jails 40 miles apart today to await a week-end hearing on charges of murdering a 29-year-old nonstriking miner.

The 48 crowded into Magistrate Belle Hamrick's office yesterday and stood grim-faced and silent while a state trooper read the single warrant charging them in the shooting of Charles Frame last Thursday.

Prosecutor James Reed said all 48 were charged because none of them would individually admit firing the shot that killed Frame.

Twenty-five were whisked away to the Kanawha County Jail at Charleston to await their preliminary hearing here Friday.

The others were returned to the unheated Clay County Jail, where all 48 had previously been jammed since their mass arrest Thursday.

Frame was slain in a burst of gunfire about 4 a. m. while he and other nonstrikers were patrolling the area. Three others were wounded.

Bank Official's Office Blasted

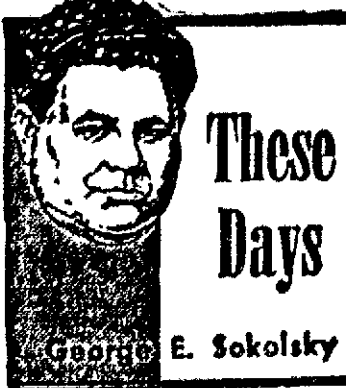

MT. IDA (AP)—An explosion demolished the office of Bank President R. A. Rice early this morning, and Rice said he believed the blast was set off by "somebody who doesn't like the bank."

Damage to the banks interior was estimated at $4,000. Windows in buildings across the street from the bank were shattered.

M. W. McGarlin, agent in charge of the FBI office in Little Rock, said the FBI was investigating the explosion.

Sheriff Wilburn Tidwell said a man who lived near the bank heard the explosion and reported it to him at 2:15 a. m.

These Days

ASIA

During the entire period, from 1929 to 1933, it has been American, British, and French policy that Europe must come first. Even during World War II, General Douglas MacArthur was left without adequate munitions because Europe came first. Even during the Korean War, our own troops were inadequately supplied because of the aid given to Europe.

Yet, Asia holds the central spot in the world today.

Asia, apparently, is a victim of a dynamic bomb. He said there was no life in the office.

"I don't know why anybody would hold anything against us," he said. "We haven't foreclosed on a mortgage since 1933."

and all the decisions of the great statesmen make no difference whatever. The course of events determines that the center of our world is that ancient continent.

Asia's vast hordes of humanity have surged forward or have been held in servitude with the swing of the pendulum of history. But this has always been true in the past: whether free or conquered, the Asiatic peoples never associated their cultures with their governments. Therefore, when conquered, they remained, nurtured and preserved their indigenous cultures.

Thus, in every Asiatic country, traditional roots remain deep and dominate the minds and character of the people, irrespective of the external of immediate political and economic conditions. It is not at all surprising that all the surviving religions of the world are Asiatic in origin.

Whether one speaks of China or India or Pakistan or any other Asiatic country, one recognizes peoples whose central point is not things but an eternal, endless, purposeful life related to God, each of these peoples conceiving his God differently but always to one end—the ultimate perfection of the spirit of man.

There is a negativism in Asiatic life. Today passes, but life never passes. Life Tze might be quoted in Walter Byner's profoundly beautiful translation:

"Man at his best, like water, serves as he goes along; Like water he seeks his own level."

The common level of life, loves living close to the earth, living clear down in his heart—

And for blocking no one's way No one blames him."

Life in the West is never content as leaving so much to fate, but the Asiatic cannot fear death, because to him it is always part of life. The result of such a grim view was better evidenced in the theories and practices of Gandhi, which somehow did bring about the liberation of India, than in the Westernized ideas and practices of Sun Yat-sen, which succeeded in bringing to the Chinese people enlightenment.

prepared for victory which can only be won by ideas. Asia can resist a conqueror endlessly and make of his conquest a despair if the people believe he has the wrong ideas. But if they believe the ideas are not wrong, why should they resist a mere political change?

NOW GAS MAKES A TV SET COST YOU LESS

Making television picture tubes used to be a slow and expensive process. In the handling of large tubes, great care had to be taken to avoid breakage. Today, as the result of advanced production techniques, it is practical to make even the largest glass and metal-shell picture tubes by high-speed, mass-production processes. An example is the unique process used in sealing the glass faceplate of the tube to the metal shell. Intense heat must be applied at just the right place to achieve a suitable bond. Tube makers found the answer to this precision heating problem in gas. With efficient mass-production, manufacturing costs are lower. And this means lower retail prices for you.

COMPANIES SERVED BY TEXAS EASTERN SERVE YOU

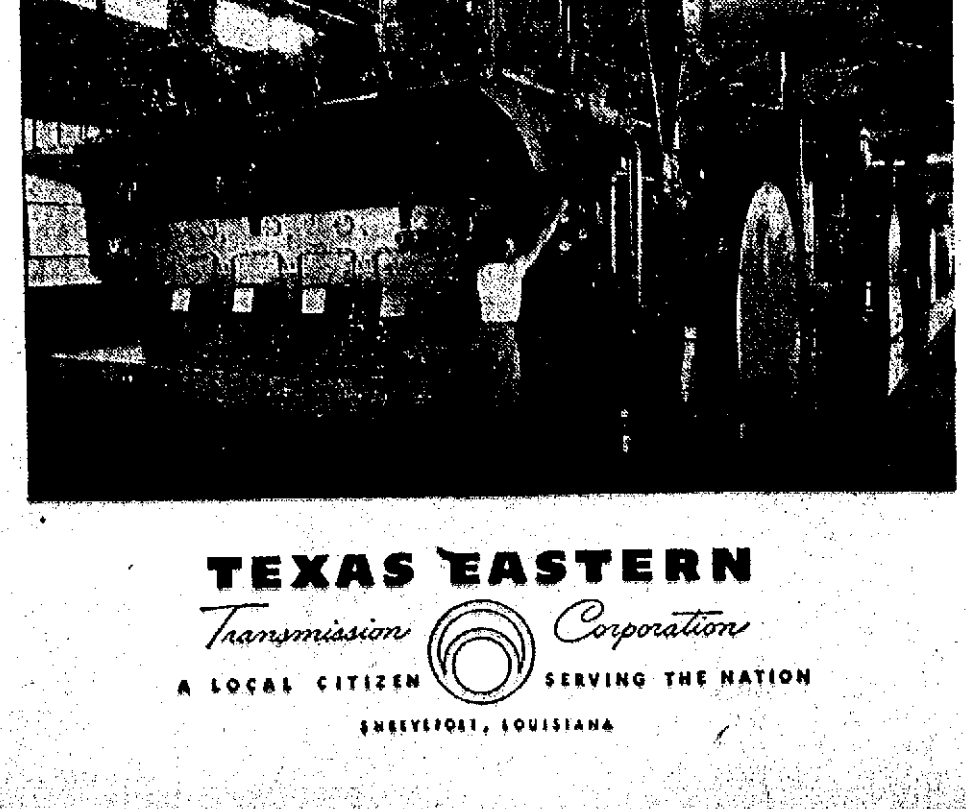

An engineer is testing picture quality of a tube. For a sharp, clear picture the phosphor coating on the inner surface of the faceplate must be smooth and uniform. Radiant gas heat not only bakes it smoothly and evenly, but does the job better than former methods. Manufacturers Light and Heat, a customer of Texas Eastern, supplies gas to Lancaster County Gas Co., which serves the RCA picture tube plant at Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Picture tubes are among the most complicated products heated by industry in mass production. Here tubes are on their way to gas-fired furnaces for the "baking-out" of the phosphor coating, a process vital to picture quality.

Every day Texas Eastern delivers approximately 1.2 billion cubic feet of natural gas for the homes and industries of the Midwest and Atlantic Seaboard. Giant compressors, like the one below, speed the gas through Texas Eastern's 4200-mile pipeline system.
